Profile of the Shire of Ngaanyatjaraku

History

The Shire of Ngaanyatjaraku is a unique local government in that its community of interest is contained within the traditional lands of the Ngaanyatjarra people of the Central Desert of Western Australia. The 99 year leases held by the Ngaanyatjarra Land Council on behalf of the traditional owners also form the boundaries of the Shire of Ngaanyatjaraku.

The Shire of Ngaanyatjaraku was formed on the 1st July 1993 by the division of the Shire of Wiluna with the eastern area becoming the new Shire. The first local government elections were held in October 1993 and 8 Councilors were elected unopposed. The communities, as originally stated in their submission to the Boundaries Commission, are committed to "mainstream" local government and the delivery of services by the Shire rather than any other organisation.

At its formation the Shire assumed responsibility for the limited services previously provided by the old Shire of Wiluna. Since then the Shire has been steadily improving and extending the range of services provided to the communities including ovals, street lights, welfare, TV and radio retransmission, swimming pools and culture. Increasingly the Shire is now undertaking the more conventional Local Government services including Health, Building, Waste Services, Litter control, Rubbish Disposal Sites, Road Sealing, Sports and Recreation, Project management and other community-based programs.

Since the establishment of the Shire there have been extensive improvements to the communications, road infrastructure and services provided to the communities within the Shire. The Shire continues to represent and be an advocate for the community at a State and Federal level of government.

Council Structure

The Shire of Ngaanyatjaraku is a local government authority under the Local Government Act (WA) 1995 (Local Government Act). This Act, and associated Regulations, set out many of the rules that govern the decision-making process and structures of Council.

The Shire of Ngaanyatjaraku is an elected body. The full Shire Council comprises five sitting members.

The management structure of the Shire of Ngaanyatjaraku reflects its status as a local authority.

The Local Government Act grants Council the authority to make determinations on a wide range of local affairs. Council may delegate its decision-making functions to constituted Committees or the Chief Executive Officer.

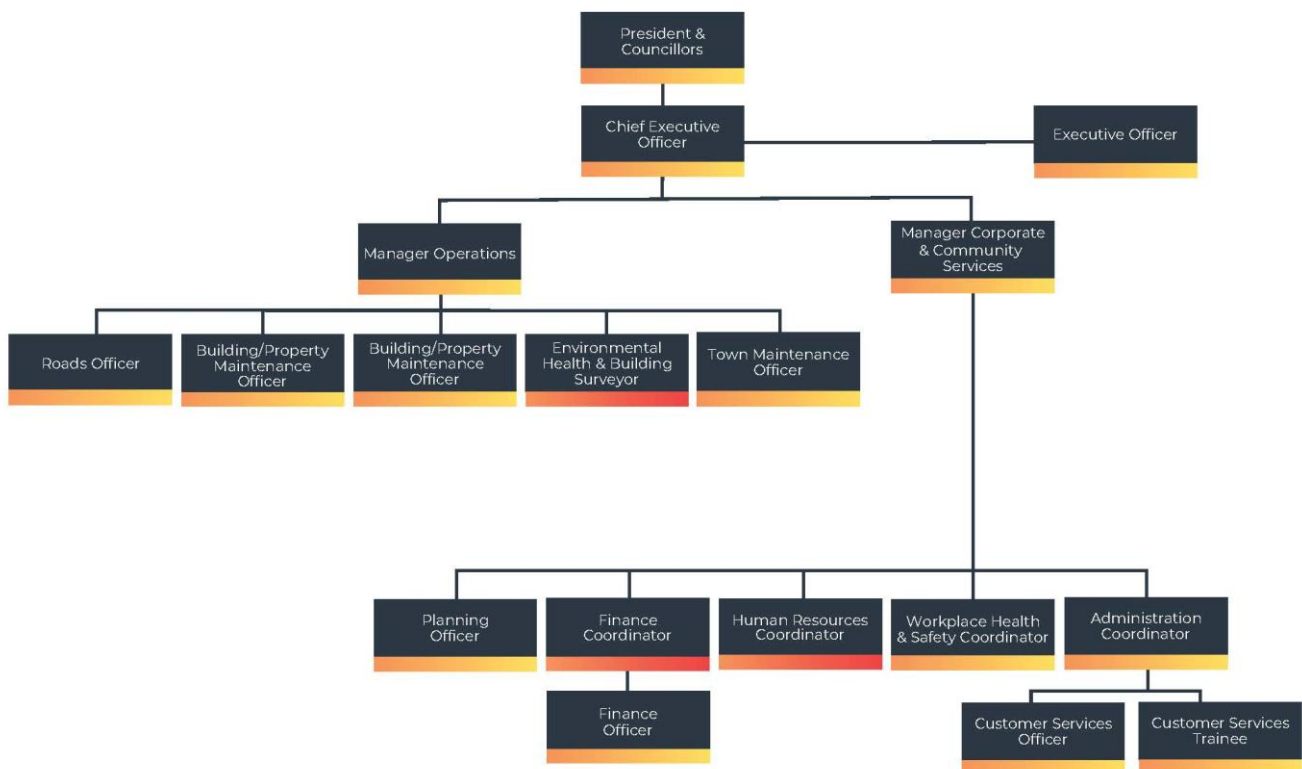

The Council of the Shire of Ngaanyatjaraku is charged with the collective responsibility for the good governance of the Shire. Having been elected by the local community, the Council and individual Councilors are responsible to the electorate for these decisions. Furthermore, the Council is bound by the various requirements of the Local Government Act and Regulations.

Council delegates authority to the Chief Executive Officer in some instances, and the Chief Executive Officer may delegate decision-making functions to officers within the Shire of Ngaanyatjarra administration.

Council, in keeping with legislative requirements, is responsible for:

- Determining policies to be applied by Council in exercising its discretionary powers;
- Determining the type, range and scope of projects to be undertaken by Council;
- Developing comprehensive management plans, budgets, financial controls and performance objectives and indicators for the operations of the Shire of Ngaanyatjarra.

These documents may include correspondence, memoranda, file notes, reports, plans, sketches, maps, diagrams, documents pertaining to the keeping of records, applications, approvals and notices.

Access to information that is not otherwise listed as available in this statement is accessed by the way of an application under the Freedom of Information Act.

Freedom of Information

Introduction

Should you be seeking access to information or documents that are not previously listed in the Administration section of this Information Statement, then it will be necessary to lodge a Freedom of Information application with the Shire of Ngaanyatjaraku. This application should clearly specify the document and/or information that you are seeking access to.

Please be aware that the Shire of Ngaanyatjaraku has limited resources it can devote to the processing of Freedom of Information claims. Accordingly, your application should be precise and set out the following details where they are applicable to your claim.

- The type of document sought;
- The date or approximate date of the document;
- The information contained within the document;
- The property address;
- Any other information that will assist the FOI Coordinator to locate the required document.

In processing applications, the Shire of Ngaanyatjaraku is wary of the amount of time it will take to assess a Freedom of Information claim and has the right under S20 of the Freedom of Information Act to refuse to deal with an application that will divert an unreasonable amount of resources from the Shire of Ngaanyatjaraku other operations. This right to refuse will only be used as a last resort. Should the Chief Executive Officer be of the opinion that an application would divert an unreasonable portion of the Shire of Ngaanyatjaraku resources away from other operations; the applicant will then be contacted with a request to reduce the scope of the original application.

The Shire of Ngaanyatjaraku is keen to ensure that the intent of the Freedom of Information Act is maintained and information requested by members of the public is made available where appropriate. Accordingly, the Shire of Ngaanyatjaraku is happy to work with applicants to reduce the scope of a claim and identify those documents that are essential to the claim.

The type of application that will generally lead to a request to reduce the scope of a claim is known as a “fishing expedition.” This application will generally include an all-encompassing phrase such as “all documents relating to” or “all information pertaining to”. Please be careful in considering which documents are likely to contain the information that is being sought.

Prior to making an application for access to information please consider the information that is available at the Shire of Ngaanyatjaraku website at www.ngaanyatjaraku.wa.gov.au.

Freedom of Information Requests

The following represents information useful to know when submitting a request for information under the Freedom of Information Act (the Act).

Documents Containing Personal Information

Documents containing personal information are afforded special recognition by the Act. Personal information is defined as information or an opinion, whether true or not, about an individual, whether living or dead:

- whose identity is apparent or can reasonably be ascertained from the information or opinion; or
- who can be identified by reference to an identification number or other

- identifying particulars such as a finger print, a retina print or body sample.
- where an applicant seeks access to a document containing personal information, a local government must take reasonable steps to:
- satisfy itself as to the identity of the applicant; and
- ensure that only the applicant or the applicant's agent, nominated in writing, receives the document.

There is no fee applicable to applications for access to personal information.

Third Party Personal Information

There may be instances where access to personal information is requested about a third party (i.e. not the applicant). If the document sought would reveal personal information about the third party, then it is one that contains exempt matter pursuant to Clause 3 of the first Schedule to the Act.

Where such an application is made, local government will be bound to consult with the third party concerned and seek his or her views as to whether the document contains exempt matter. If, after that process of consultation, a local government decides to give access to the document, the third party must be notified and given time to exercise the appeal rights provided under the Act before access can physically be given to the applicant.

The Right of Access to Documents

Section 10 of the Act provides that a person has a right to be given access to the documents of the Shire of Ngaanyatjaraku. That right is unaffected by:

- any reasons the person gives for wishing to obtain access; or
- the Shire of Ngaanyatjaraku's belief as to the person's reasons for wishing to obtain access.

Accordingly, an individual could apply for access to information in order to gather information for legal proceedings against a local authority. Unless the document at issue was exempted under the Act, access would have to be granted in these circumstances.

Procedures

Application

It is Council's aim to make information available promptly and at the least possible cost, and whenever possible documents will be provided outside the Freedom of Information process.

If information is not readily available, the Act provides the right to apply for documents held by Council and to enable the public to ensure that information in documents is accurate, complete, up to date and not misleading. The following describes the way of making such an application.

Freedom of Information Applications

If you are seeking access to a document(s) on behalf of another person, Council will require authorisation, usually in writing.

All requests for access to these documents must be made by:

- lodging an application in writing;
- giving enough information so that the requested documents may be identified;
- give an Australian address to which notices may be sent; and

- be lodged at the Council with any application fee payable.

There is no fee applicable for personal information about the applicant.

Applicants will be notified in writing and are notified of the decision concerning access within 45 calendar days as specified in the Act.

If Council is unable to meet the requirements of the applicant within the 45-day time constraint, Council will contact the applicant to negotiate and reach agreement on an alternative date, outside the permitted period. If an agreement cannot be reached between the parties, the Council can then apply to the Information Commissioner for an extension of time. The application must be in writing explaining the attempts made to comply and the reasons why it is impracticable to deal with the application within the “permitted period” of 45 days.

If the Council does not give the applicant written notice of decision within the “permitted period”, the applicant has a right to apply to the Council for an internal review of the “deemed refusal”. The procedures set out in the FOI Act enable a person who is aggrieved by a decision made by an agency in relation to an access application, to apply to the agency (within 30 days) for an internal review of that decision (the “deemed refusal”). Section 13(3) of the FOI Act provides that the “permitted period” within which an agency is required to deal with an access application and make a decision on access is 45 days or such other period as may be agreed between the applicant and the agency or as allowed by the A/Commissioner under ss.13(4) or (5) of the FOI Act.

Council may request proof of identity prior to giving access to the documents.

Internal Reviews

If an applicant is unhappy with the decision made by Council in respect to his/her Freedom of Information application, or the fees charged for the application, he/she has the right to an Internal Review by Council.

Applications for Internal Review should:

- be made in writing;
- give details of the decision that the applicant wishes to have reviewed;
- provide an Australian address to which notices can be sent; and
- be lodged within 30 calendar days of receiving written notice from Council of its decision.

Internal Reviews will be handled by the Chief Executive Officer. There is no cost associated with an Internal Review.
